Native Peoples of Washington Map Description

Depicted in the map are the present-day Native American tribal entities who are based in the state of Washington, whether or not they are currently recognized by the United States government. Tribes are mapped by their reservations (purple polygons, which may include other tribally owned or trust properties) or by an approximate location (red triangles). Other features depicted in the map are the generalized boundary for the State of Washington, the county boundaries and select cities of Washington, along with backgrounds providing shaded relief for terrestrial and marine environments.

The GIS data layers and other information utilized to create the map came from numerous sources, including the following: each of the Native peoples listed above, ESRI, USGS, WA Department of Ecology, WA Department of Transportation, Google Earth/Maps, WashingtonTribes.org, Northwest Indian Fisheries Commission, WA Governor's Office of Indian Affairs, Burke Museum, US Bureau of Indian Affairs, WA Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction – Office of Native Education, and the Puyallup Tribe.
